Oh, how moving are some of the descriptions of Richard's life - the writing really evokes the emotions that must have been felt. It left me in tears on more than one occasion, but it is not soppy or mawkish, but has just the right "touch of pity" for it to be moving. Recommended, but have some tissues handy!

Based on the life of Richard III, King of England.

Excerpt from Gaisford Prize: Translation From Shakespeare, Richard III, Act I, Scene 2 Thy deed, inhuman and unnatural, Provokes this deluge most unnatural. 19 O God, which this blood madest, revenge his death! O earth, which this blood drink'st, revenge his death! Either heaven with lightning strike the murderer dead, Or earth, gape open wide and eat him quick, As thou dost swallow up this good king's blood, Which his hell-govern'd arm hath butchered Glen. Lady, you know no rules of charity, Which renders good for bad, blessings for curses. Anne. Villain, thou know'st no law of God nor man No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity. Glen. But I know none, and therefore am no beast. 30 Anne. O wonderful, when devils tell the truth! Glen. More wonderful, when angels are so angry. Vouchsafe, divine perfection of a woman, Of these supposed evils, to give me leave, By circumstance, but to acquit myself. Anne. Vouchsafe, defused infection of a man, For these known evils, but to give me leave, By circumstance, to curse thy cursed self. Gian. Fairer than tongue can name thee, let me have Some patient leisure to excuse myself. 40 Anne. F ouler than heart can think thee, thou canst make No excuse current, but to hang thyself.
